

A BRIEF GUIDE TO FOOTNOTE CITATIONS IN HISTORY: Notes and Bibliography system

Note: If a book or article is available in more than one format, cite the format you consulted. For accuracy in citing sources, print formats are preferred. You do not need to indicate that you consulted a source in print (that is the default format) or a digitized version of a print edition. For books or journal articles consulted online which are not digitized versions of a print edition, provide a URL (include an access date only if the text can be altered). For an informal essay, if no fixed page numbers are indicated, provide a section title or a chapter and a paragraph number to locate the citation. For research papers, you must cite a page number for all sources.

Full references (all of the information that you might need to include, although for many sources, you will only need to include the * items):

Book:

- *Author's full name [as presented on the title page]
[NOTE: if the author of the book is actually the editor of a collection, then write: author's name, ed., or author and author, eds. if the book has more than one author]
- *Complete title of the book (either in italics or underlined)
- Editor, compiler, or translator, if any [this is an individual who is not the author]
- Name of series in which book appears, if any, and volume or number in the series
- Edition, if other than the first
- Number of volumes
- *Facts of publication – city where published: publisher, date of publication
- Volume number, if any
- *Page number(s) of the particular citation

FOOTNOTE FORMAT:

first citation:

Author [as presented; usually first name, middle initial, last name], Title (place: publisher, date of publication), page number(s). [NOTE: you do not need to write p. or pp. before the page numbers]

subsequent citations:

Author [last name only], shortened title, page number(s).

[NOTE: the shortened title might give the first part of the title or key words from the title]

a citation immediately following a previous citation:

Ibid., page number.

[NOTE: when working with multiple sources, do not use Ibid. unless you have finished revising and editing your essay. Otherwise, when you cut and paste a quotation and its reference mark, it might end up following a reference to a different source.]

“Article” in a Periodical or Newspaper:

- *Author's full name
[NOTE: for a newspaper article, include this if there is a byline]
- *Title of the article (in quotation marks)
[NOTE: for a newspaper article, give the headline, and subhead, if any]
- *Name of the periodical or newspaper (either in italics or underlined)
- *Volume (and number) of the periodical
- *Date of the volume or issue
[NOTE: for a newspaper article, give the full date]
- *Page number (s) of the particular citation
[NOTE: for a newspaper article, give the section, if any and page number]

FOOTNOTE FORMAT:

first citation:

Periodical: Author [as presented, usually first name, middle initial, last name], "Title," Journal volume, number (date), page numbers(s).

Newspaper: Author [if a byline is listed], "Headline: subhead," Newspaper vol., number (day, month, year), section [if any], page number.

subsequent citations:

Author [last name only], "shortened title," page number(s).

a citation immediately following a previous citation:

Ibid., page number.

[NOTE: in this case, since the reference is to an article rather than a book, Ibid. is not italicized or underlined]

Unpublished Material:

*Author

*Title of document [or description of document], if any, and date

*Folio number (or box number or other identifying specific)

*Name of collection

*Depository, and city where it is located

A primary source or primary document reprinted in a Secondary Source or Edited Collection, or a quotation from another author, reprinted in a Secondary Sources or Edited Collection:

*Full name of the author of the primary source

*Complete title of the primary source (if it was originally published) OR a description of the text if it is unpublished

*Facts of publication or origin (place, date)

*Reprinted in:

[then list full citation for the source in which you found the text]

FOOTNOTE FORMAT:

first citation:

Author [as presented, usually first name, middle initial, last name], Title [or "Title"], (place: publisher [if any], date), reprinted in Author(s) [first name initial last name], ed. [or eds.], Title (place: publisher, date of publication), page number(s).

subsequent citations:

Author [last name only of the author of the document], shortened title [or "shortened title"], page number(s).

a citation immediately following a previous citation:

Ibid., page number(s)

A primary source or primary document archived on a website:

Begin the citation with the all of the bibliographic information for the original document (the website should include this information).

Then: title of list/website, <internet address of the site>, [menu path for the particular source], date if provided.

Adapted from A Manual of Style: Twelfth Edition, Revised. (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1969), 346.