Instructions: Select one primary document (rather than a secondary essay written by a contemporary historian), written by one author, that addresses an aspect, issue, concern, etc. about family and/or community in North America. You may choose a primary document from any of the edited collections listed above, from other document collections or sources in the library, or you may search for a document online.

For the first essay, select a document written before 1800.

For the second essay, select a document written between 1800 and 1900.

If you find a primary document from another source, either in the library or on the internet, please check in with me before proceeding with your critical analysis.
